Foundation Headquarters LEED Certified

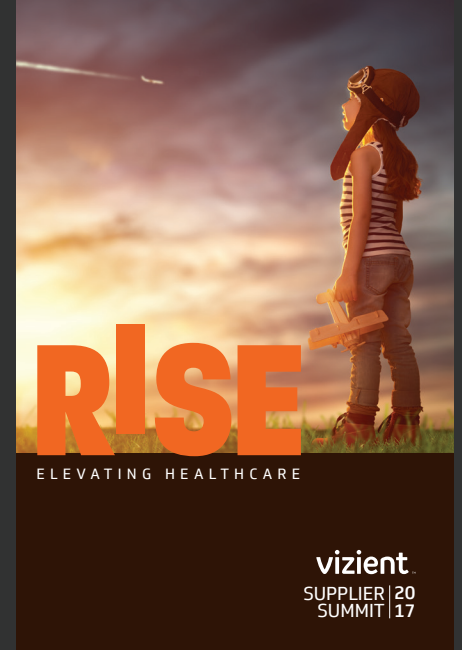

Greater Texas Foundation has always had high standards for its green-building, partnerships and research. Sustainability is very important to the foundation in its funding and work to increase postsecondary education attainment for Texas residents. It's no surprise that the board of directors would carry those same standards and commitment to sustainability over to the design and construction of the foundation's new facility by using the U.S. Green Building Council's Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) principles. Following this vision is our Partner & Karl Architects and Brown & Butler Construction recorded in designing and building the first new construction LEED Gold Certified building in Brown, Texas – which we saw as an opportunity to consider using LEED sustainable and environmentally responsible building principles. Texas member Duncan Tins Architecture and Interiors developed interior architecture and furnishings consistent with this mission and assisted in the development of our LEED educational component. We welcome you to visit and enter a tour of our new office, or if you can't visit in person, learn about our LEED Gold building on our website at www.greatertxfoundation.org.

Around the world, robots are working with humans to make some of the most dangerous jobs more productive and much safer:

- In manufacturing, robots perform repetitive and sometimes hazardous tasks such as welding, assembling, dismantling, packaging, inspecting, and testing—at higher speeds and with greater precision than humans can produce.
- In oil production, robotic drills operate in cold, high-pressure environments, and in other extreme environments that can become too treacherous for people to manage alone.

More than 4.9 billion metric tons of soda bottles, grocery bags and other plastic waste now reside in the world's landfills or pollute the natural environment—a number that could grow (according to

A LEGACY OF AGGIE KNOWLEDGE

Texas A&M University Libraries comprise five distinct libraries that seek to advance student success, be a partner in innovative research, and provide a physical and digital home to students, faculty, researchers and staff. Today, the libraries are still centered on a foundation established nearly 145 years ago.

WORLD MAP PRESERVED BY TEXAS A&M UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

World Map. It takes help tell the stories of various and the countless they made for their names. The libraries are preserving these stories by digitizing a set of American maps and maps from 1800. The maps don't just chart land. They contain personal, and the development of maps as they change across Europe.

The collection at Cushing Memorial Library & Archives holds a World Map that was that claimed the loss of 400 Aggies.

25 YEARS OF COLLECTING: Cushing Memorial Library & Archives

In October 1998, the newly renovated Cushing Memorial Library & Archives, Texas A&M University's first stand alone library, was dedicated as the new home of Special Collections and University Archives. To commemorate this anniversary, Cushing opened an exhibition in October to celebrate 25 years of collecting and cultural program development.

The exhibition's wide range of historical manuscripts, rare books, significant maps and ephemera open windows, continents and culture. They exemplify the breadth and energy of Texas A&M University Libraries holdings.

A debt of gratitude is owed to Cushing's past and present supporters, who are dedicated to its mission to preserve cultural and intellectual heritage in pursuit of knowledge and learning. With their ongoing support, Cushing will continue to expand its collections and embrace new initiatives.

Within the addition of fellows to engineering faculty lies a unique success story. Alan Needleman, a 2012-13 fellow and one of the world's most cited scholars, joined Texas A&M's faculty upon completing his work in the Hager Institute. The College of Science and the College of Engineering joined forces to form a new Department of Materials Science and Engineering (MSDE) with Needleman as its most distinguished faculty member. He was soon joined by new hires of top professors, including George Pharr, another noted researcher and member of the National Academy of Engineering. Renowned scientist and engineer Edwin "Ned" Thomas later joined the faculty of that department after initially being attracted to the Hager Institute for Advanced Study while at Rice University. These three highly accomplished individuals were hired into either a Chancellor's Research Initiative (CRI) position or a Governor University Research Initiative (GURI) position. Each CRI and GURI position came with two additional faculty positions and startup funds of about $5 million. These three National Academy of Engineering hires were instrumental in advancing the new MSDN department from startup to national and international prominence.

JON L. HAGLER '58 IS HIGHLY REGARDED AND RESPECTED AT THE UNIVERSITY FOR BOTH HIS LEADERSHIP AND CONTRIBUTIONS THAT HAVE SPANNED DECADES.

ABOUT

2003 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD 101

JON L. HAGLER '58 FUNDED A SIGNIFICANT ENDOWMENT FOR THE INSTITUTE FOR ADVANCED STUDY TO ENSURE ITS PERMANENCE AS AN EPITOME OF EXCELLENCE ON THE A&M CAMPUS.

His devotion to Texas A&M has been evident throughout his adult life. Jon L. Hagler is recognized nationally as a leader in investment management as well as philanthropy. In 1984, he and wife Jo Ann founded the Jon L. Hagler Foundation, a private, independent foundation that has financially supported Texas A&M as well as multiple philanthropic efforts across the nation.

Hagler has shown an interest in supporting overarching initiatives that elevate Texas A&M's academic stature and contribute to A&M's long-term success. He is highly regarded and respected at the university for his leadership and contributions, both of which have spanned decades.

Texas A&M recognized Hagler with an honorary doctorate in 2015 and the 2005 Sterling C. Evans Medal for his dedication in supporting Texas A&M. He was named a Texas A&M Distinguished Alumnus in 1999 and is a past member of the board of directors of the Association of Former Students.

Hagler chaired the executive committee of the One Spirit, One Vision campaign from 2000 to 2006; co-chaired the university's 1999 strategic planning initiative; Vice 2020: Creating a Culture of Excellence served as past chairman and trustee member of the Texas A&M Foundation Board of Trustees; and was the leading donor of the Texas A&M Foundation's campus headquarters named in his honor.

He has offered valuable guidance as a member of the Institute's external advisory board since its formation and through his generosity has helped make the Institute a permanent part of the university's prestigious leadership in years ahead. To ensure the director's care to provide research support for future directors of the Institute.

Hagler received his bachelor's degree from Texas A&M in 1958, was a Corps of Cadets commander during his senior year, and served as a Ross Volunteer. He earned an MBA from Harvard University in 1963.
